You probably don't need us to say that this bed is the work of Martino Gamper: its distinctive polygonal shape and patches of colour, both Gamper signatures, are a giveaway.

Designed for Italian brand Bolzan, the piece features a large wooden headboard that is padded and upholstered in blue velvet with suspended bedside tables (complete with integrated wireless-charging technology) and a bed frame in pink lacquer. Price on application (bolzan.com).

Czech glassmaker Lasvit has released a series of fiery vases adorned with hand-blown glass resembling molten lava. Designed by Maxim Velčovský, Lasvit's creative director, each piece is unique and captures every bubble and wrinkle from the glassblowing process. The design pays homage to the postmodernist designer Bořek Šípek, whose avant-garde vision paved the way for Lasvit's glasswork. Approx £9,710 (lasvit.com).

First came the chair. Next was a stool, bench and an armchair. Now, Big Game has adapted its viral 'Bold' design for French brand Moustache into a tubular sofa. Like the pieces that came before, it is constructed from a steel structure injected with high-resilience foam. It is also totally modular – you can design your own compositions with the online tool and select from 15 colours. From approx £1,605 (moustache.fr).

French pioneer of collectible design, Hervé Van der Straeten caused a stir with his exhibition 'Antidote', a creative reaction against the immediacy of our times, at Maison&Objet in Paris last month. Van der Straeten's radical, graphic lines feature in the 30 new furniture pieces shown, while shimmering lacquers, acid colors and shiny plexiglas created a dazzling environment. Pictured: 'Antidote' table and 'Antidote' ceiling light, both price on application (vanderstraeten.fr).
